Screams Aroused Neighborhood While Thugs Threatened Her with Pistol.

MEN FRIGHTENED OFF.

Caught by Policemen and Held for Grand Jury, They May Get 20 Years in Prison.

Lillian White, a handsome young actress, related in the West Side Court to-day how two young highwaymen attacked her and attempted to rob her at the point of a pistol to-day as she was entering her home at No. 235 West Thirty-fourth street.

The highwaymen, who were captured by Policeman Grant, of the West Thirty-seventh street station, said they were Armand Berger, nineteen years old, of No. 357 West Forty-third street, and John Taylor, twenty-five, of No. 370 Eighth avenue. They were held for the Grand July in $4,000 ball each by Magistrate Whitman.

"I had been out late, visiting friends," said Miss White, "and started home around 2 o'clock this morning. Alighting from a Broadway car at Thirtyfourth street, I walked rapidly toward my home. I had only proceeded a short way when I felt that I was being followed. Glancing behind me, I saw two men pressing down upon me in long

"Crossing Seventh avenue I picked up my skirts and dashed for home. But these men came running after me and, still running, I screamed for help. As I approached the house where I live people in neighboring houses heard my ories and opened their windows. Some of them yelled for help, too, but this upon me as I threw myself into the vestibule of my home. "As I struggled to get my key in the door one of the men gripped me about the throat with both hands. I fought and kicked and bit, but he held on, choking me, while the other one shoved the muzzle of a pistol in my face and said: 'if you don't give me your money I will kill you.' Then I heard some one hurrying down the stairs, when these men dropped me and fled." The highwaymen were escaping toward Eighth avenue when Policeman Grant, attracted by the uproar from the scores of men and women shouting for help from their windows, turned for help from their windows, turned the corner, revolver in hand. Threatening to shoot, he made them prisoners and took them to the West Thirty-seventh street station.

When searched the revolver was found on the man who called himself Berger. A bottle that contained the dregs of wine and had a peculiar odor was found in the other prisoner's packet. Believing that this bottle contained chloral, it was sent to the Board of Health for analysis. If the wine was drugged with chloral the one that had it can be sentenced to more than twenty years' im-continuation of the Hohenzollern succession.

Just as Emperor William and his bride were boy and girl comrades, so were Prince blitel Fritz and Duchess Sophia Charlotte. It is customary to estate with regard to roval matches that they are based on genuine attachment. In this case it may be stated with more than usual safety that the union is the result of a genuine love affair. Since Prince Eitel Fritz was a military cadet at Caste Ploen and the Princess was a little eith in short frocks they have been playmates. She was then a delicate and highly strung girl whose health gave her mother much anxiety. She has outgrown all that and is making of a "tomboy." to the great dispress of the strict German court, where Idol of Her People.

From the fact that the Kalser himself has made a favorite of this prince rather than of his elder son it may be argued that the fetish of the divine right of Kings, the which his father has always insisted upon, the supremacy of the military authority over civil and the nevitable mission of the German people are all accepted tenets of the young prince. His training has taught him to be very intolerant of the growing power of the Socialist party in the empire, and, like his elder brother, he dislikes fier Bebel, the powerful Socialist leader, believing him to be a deadly menace to the fatheriand.

Mrs. Leary's first intimation of any thing wrong was when she found the little spark of gaslight that burns in the hall all night extinguished this morning. The doors opening from a nallway handsomely ornamented with bric-a-brac were opened, too, and inside on the divan drowsed the two handsom Amgora cats, which are never allowed in there at night. The next item was the phonograph box, ripped open, the machine and records thrown around the room, and the piano carefully closed, so that no chance touch would cause it to sound the alarm.

Alarmed at these indications, Mrs. Leary ran to the kitchen, where she ound that a pane of glass had been roken, the catch opened and the winlow raised.
